VI. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions based on it:

Child-Woman

A) At least one child out of every four in the developing countries is toiling under conditions resembling slavery, according to a UNICEF report. The 1997 report on the 'State of the World's Children' points out that an estimated 250 million children in the age group 5 – 14 are engaged in hazardous work. Still, we celebrate Children's Day every year and pass meaningless resolutions – almost the same resolutions – year after year!

The right to primary education is universally agreed upon as basic to a child's development and future well-being, but, barring the privileged ones, it is denied to the vast majority, especially to girls. Children below fourteen years, both boys and girls, are engaged in activities that are unfit for them, despite laws against child labour. Free and compulsory education is guaranteed in our Constitution but ours is a country in which opposites co-exist and contradictions thrive; nowhere are these more apparent than in the area of women's education and child labour.

Millions of female children do not get the opportunity of even acquiring a modicum of basic education because of our attitude towards girls' education. For the female child, induction into adult activities, both household work and other production-related activities, begins early. The poorer the family, the greater is the work burden on the girl-child. Girls do household chores to the extent of being surrogate mothers since their mothers go out to work to provide the family's basic needs like food and clothing. In urban areas, girls work as domestic servants; they are employed in match factories, carpet-weaving centres, textile and garment industries, in construction work, and in other hazardous and harmful occupations. In rural areas, they work in fields, get fuel and water for the family, even cook and look after other children in the family. With 80% of our population living in rural areas, it is the life of girls in villages that truly represents the reality of the situation: girls are not children—they are child-women. Isn't it sad?

1) When is children's day celebrated every year?
2) What does the UNICEF report say about child labour?
3) Why doesn't a girl child get basic education, according to the author?
4) How do girls earn for their families, in urban areas?
5) In what way do the girls in rural areas contribute to their families?
6) Why does the author refer to girls as child-women?

B) 1) What does the 1997 report say about the state of children?
2) What picture of primary education scenario does the passage reflect?

VII. 1) Write a paragraph in about 80–100 words persuading your father to permit you to join your friends on a college trip to Delhi. You may use the following points.

- a historic city
- an educative tour
- fun time with friends
- final year of college life
- not very expensive.
2) Write a paragraph in about 80 - 100 words reflecting on the increasing number of teenage suicides.

You may use the hints given below:

Peer pressure — parental pressure — influence of the media — lack of confidence — improper understanding of life — after quick success — lack of strength of character — proper counselling is the need of the hour.

VIII. Summarize the following passage. Your summary must have at least four main points. Give a suitable title to the summary.

Whales are the largest animals in the sea. The largest animals on land are the elephants. But compared to a whale, it would be like a cat but for its shape. Whales are huge and heavy giants. The largest whale is the blue whale which grows about a hundred feet long. Some of them weigh more than a hundred and twenty tons. While the normal weight of an elephant is not more than seven tons. A whale eats two or three tons of food at a single meal.

If whales eat so many tons of food at each meal, you may wonder how there are any fish left in the sea for us to catch. But the oceans are vast and not all whales eat so much fish. The Blue Whale lives wholly on Plankton. A stretch of Plankton, you know, is spread over miles and miles of sea water. Smaller than the Blue Whale in size is the sperm whale. It grows to a length of sixty feet.
